Center for Homeland Defense and Security Homeland Security Digital Library

The Homeland Security Digital Library (HSDL) is the nation's premier collection of documents relating to homeland security policy, strategy and organizational management. The mission of the HSDL is to strengthen the national security of the United States by supporting local, state, territorial, tribal and federal analysis, debate, and decision-making needs and to assist academics of all disciplines in homeland defense and security-related research.

The Collection

HSDL materials are carefully selected and evaluated by a team of librarians and content specialists. They include resources from government agencies, professional and nonprofit organizations, think tanks, academic institutions, international governments and institutions, and private entities. The collection documents offers users a wide range of materials covering contemporary and historical issues in homeland security and its related fields.

These materials are offered at no cost.

Highlights of the HSDL

- Policy and Strategy Documents: Access key U.S. policy documents, presidential directives, national strategy documents, major legislation, executive orders, GAO and CRS reports
- Featured Topics: Browse topical collections of materials relevant to issues of current interest to our national security
- On the Homefront Blog: View a synopsis of the most recent reports and issues relevant to the nation's safety and security
- Theses and Research Reports: Find national security-related theses and research reports produced at the Naval Postgraduate School and at the Center for Homeland Defense and Security

Access to the HSDL

A limited portion of the collection is open to the public, however access to the full collection and special features are available only to individual account holders. These special features include:

- Individualized email alerts: automated and updated information of personal interest
- Critical Releases: email alerts including the latest and most influential information in homeland defense and security

U.S. citizens who are local, state, tribal, territorial and federal U.S. government officials, U.S. military members, homeland security researchers, academics and infrastructure protection specialists are eligible to register for individual access to the HSDL. Organization-wide access is also available.

Additionally, the HSDL has a Restricted Collection, comprising sensitive materials collected from national, state and local fusion centers, threat analysis centers and law enforcement organizations. Access to this section requires an individual account as well as additional and prior approval by HSDL staff.
